5 P.M. WINE & HORS D'OEUVRES RECEPTION

5:30 DINNER

Old Town Brasserie is the newest creation of veteran restaurateur Bob Djahanguiri, owner of legendary Chicago restaurants Toulouse and Yvette. The restaurant The Chicago Tribune called "One of the best new restaurants of the year" is rapidly becoming one of Old Town's most popular dining spots.

At Old Town Brasserie, you'll find classic French brasserie fare with a bit of added elegance and some playful twists. "There's no rule that says a brasserie must have French onion soup and steak frites," declare Djahanguiri.

Andy Motto attended the Culinary Institute of America, where he learned classic French cuisine. After school, Motto returned to Chicago, where he worked with chef Roland Liccioni at Le Français and Les Nomades.

He had a brief stay in Napa Valley to experience the French Laundry and the perfection of chef Thomas Keller, then he came back to the Windy City. He was chef at some of Chicago's best restaurants, including Tru, Charlie Trotter's and Le Lan.

Chef Motto believes in the constant evolution of his cuisine. By traveling the world, eating and being exposed to the newest techniques and flavors, Motto had developed his own cooking style. His passion is evident in every bite of his food.
