urbanbelly is about the communal dining experience.

Meet new people. Eat great food. Feed your belly from the heart.

Bill and Yvonne Cadiz-Kim

Salvaged wooden planks from old Indonesian ships create a point of interest in the minimalist dining room. Custom-made Chinese Elmwood tables, stools, and benches from Golden Triangle help foster a sense of community among diners. "Communal dining is something new to the Chicago market," says Yvonne Cadiz-Kim, co-owner with husband Bill Kim and the restaurant's designer. "At first, people thought we were crazy to try this, but they've been pleasantly surprised by the bonding that has been taking place between strangers."

CHEF WILLIAM KIM

We all go through the process of evolving. In that process we seek out people who we can learn from along the way. Inspiration is personal. Some of us seek out knowledge and learn from the best to challenge our evolutionary process. I keep myself open to learning everything I can and apply some of that knowledge to my own style of cooking. Now, there is more meaning to life than just being a chef. Yes, you develop your cuisine but it's more than that for me, now it's an expression of who I am. That's what UrbanBelly is all about.
